SENSATION: Budding young Toddler turns from belly to back

Hedingen - On September 17th it was reported that Victor Stougaard Bucka-Lassen, a premature born toddler, not even four weeks old, successfully turned from belly to back. "He was laying there on his belly", the proud dad recounts, "and all of a sudden he had turned himself over on his back side." The mother and grandmother were called over to witness a second attempt and sure enough, Victor did it again and again. "I expect him to walk tomorrow", the father states with a smile.

World Record

"This is very astonishing", Peter Meinfeld, Toddler-turning expert, ETH Zürich, says. He goes on explaining how babies typically develop and that it normally takes several months before they are capable of performing such an action. "A very unusual case. We are currently investigating whether Victor fulfills the requirements to be admitted to the Guinness Book of World Records. It is by far the earliest reporting I have ever heard of" Mr. Meinfeld ensures.

Specialists puzzled

Specialists from the Singapore Sports School are saying this is unseen to mankind and predict an exceptional career for the young boy. His strong back and neck muscles combined with his surprising agility make it very likely that he one day will compete on the highest level in sports like for instance Formula 1 or Golf.

TV & Movies

BBC has announced they are planning a reality show on Victor and his twin sister Sofia. Meanwhile Paramount Pictures has secured the rights for a movie about "Wonder Boy". Arnold Schwarzenegger has been asked to star in it as the dad and is currently considering to end his political career so he can focus on this role.

Sofia and Victor were born on August 21st. Though heavier, Victor had some initial problems with catching his breath. "He sure has shown us all who the boss is – more than once" the father tells us. The family has just recently bought an apartment in Birmensdorf, where the Swiss National Football coach Köbi Kuhn also lives – go figure. /KBL